Alison Good, ARNP, Joins Iowa Methodist Occupational Medicine

Methodist Occupational Health & Wellness is pleased to announce that Alison Good, ARNP, is now practicing occupational medicine in our Des Moines area clinics. Methodist Occupational Health & Wellness operates three full-service occupational medicine clinics offering work-related injury care, employment physicals, DOT services, respiratory certification exams, drug and alcohol testing, and more.

Alison Good is a graduate of the Nurse Practitioner program at Allen College of Nursing in Waterloo, IA, and has clinical experience in emergency medicine, critical care, wound care, and family medicine. After working in the nursing field for 8 years, she obtained her NP license and pursued a career in occupational medicine, where she is interested in developing working relationships with area employers in an effort to expedite their employees' safe and productive return to the workplace.

Please help us welcome Alison to our practice. If you have any questions or to arrange a facility tour or meeting with Alison, please contact Steve Krob, Manager of Business Operations, at (515) 241-2223.

Methodist Occupational Health & Wellness is the area's only hospital-based occupational medicine program, offering a full menu of work-related health services to central Iowa employers. The program operates three clinics in the Des Moines metro, including our Prairie Trail clinic in Ankeny, the East clinic at Penn Medical Place in Des Moines, and the West clinic at Lakeview Medical Park in West Des Moines. With the addition of Alison Good, Methodist now employs six occupational medicine providers, including two board certified in occupational medicine.
